Subject: tax reform

I am feeling deep outrage about what I am reading that the special committee for tax reform chair wants a flat tax that is meant to tax lower middle class and poor and continue to give the rich their financially unhealthy tax breaks.

America considers itself to be primarily a Christian nation, yet on government policies it promotes decidedly unchristian policies. Judging by the fruit of their actions, many so-called Christians have failed to recognize that they worship God in name only and not in action. They have taken God off the the throne and placed on it the god of money. God in his place and money in the market place. Uh uh! That's not how it works. It's God or face whatever financial calamities befall. Unfortunately the rich, including our lawmakers, have a cushion to protect them, the poor do not. So you believe you can continue to act with impunity.

I think Gov. Schwartzneggar (spelling is probably wrong) admires and supports those who are successful and powerful and has secret disdain for the poor and weak.
